Chief Complaint

Cough lasting five days that began dry and has become productive with yellowish sputum, accompanied by sore throat, nasal congestion, and fatigue.

History of Present Illness

The patient reports a five-day history of a dry cough that progressed to a small amount of yellowish sputum beginning yesterday. He also notes a sore throat, nasal congestion, and generalized tiredness. He denies known antibiotic allergies and has a longstanding history of asthma, using a salbutamol inhaler as needed. He takes 500 mg paracetamol for fever when it occurs. He is allergic to an unspecified substance that causes hives. Plan: symptomatic management and monitoring of respiratory symptoms.
